ANNOUNCEMENT!

Thanking the Ladies of Chicago and Vicinity for the generous patronage bestowed upon us during the past season and feeling that our efforts are being fully appreciated, we beg to announce the Universal Opening of our Fall Dress Goods Department on Monday, October 15, 1866, when Novelties and Importations of every description, Staple Goods, Cloaks, Shawls, Suits, Furs, Hosiery, Underwear, Gloves, Corsets, Notions, Embroideries, Small Wares, etc., purchased during the past month by our Messrs. and Mr. Tuohy from the leading importers and manufacturers of every quarter of the globe.

Our secondary motive for anticipating together with our competent facilities for purchasing for cash, enables us to exhibit attractions which quadruple all former displays, at prices which will prove unusually economical and insure satisfactory trade and unexpected gratification.

Below we cite a few of the thousand things which, on examination, will prove true and unexpected gratifications.

BARGAINS,

PURE AND SIMPLE, ESPECIALLY VALUES.

Which we take our possibly deplorable notoriety for, in our every move.

HATS! HATS! HATS!

Another New Department!

Wilde's Clothing House

Men's Fine Silk Hats, $3.

To advertise it extensively and to make it popular we shall begin on Monday morning to sell Men's NEW HATS—of the latest and most fashionable shapes—nothing but the best qualities of medium and fine Hats will we wear sell.

Men's Stiff Hats, $1.50.

Anybody can say that, but wait a moment; let us measure this Hat closely. It is made of Fur—nothing but Fur—silk-lined, leather sweatband, in style the newest shape worn, and the price $1.50. Come and see this Hat. A dollar on a Hat is worth saving.

Men's Stiff Hats, $2.50.

It will puzzle you to judge between them. The difference in price is simply in the quality of the Fur, although we are told the usual price elsewhere for such Hats is $4.00. Remember Wilde's Clothing House sells them at $2.50.

Boys' and Children's Hats, 50c.

Mothers, think of this. Boys' Wool Hats—shape as $1.00—for a few days only 50c. Silk Plush and Corduroy Hats and Caps, $1.50 and $2. Fur Caps with bands and without bands, 50c, 75c, and $1.00.

Wilde's Hats will soon be as popular as Wilde's Clothing when the quality and price is known.

HIS OWNERS CONCEIVED HIS FUTURE AND SHAPED HIS.

A Glimpse of His Own Personality Revealed from His Letters—The Girl and the Poet Friend of Ashley—Booth's Daughter at Bradley's Mechanics Institute and Booth—Plans of "Hamlet"—The Elder Booth and Evan Harrington.

The inherent egotism of an actor is apt to betray, at least vaguely, his point of view in other arts, but any light Booth casts is in other lines, as it explains a whole series of points that, too much for us in outline, it is not given me to see. But Mr. Booth is the only person who has ever written in the world from and under Booth (except that purpose of Evan Harrington the Equity Tragedian), for [illegible] has never personally stood to any considerable size as Booth to the public although perhaps very interested in some considerable extent, it is not to speak and the heart of his mystery, for to show any personality, as far as I guess to be on, has no object nor been an object.

There should then be nothing but a gratified sense of Mr. Booth. So to speaking of the old actors, and the fundamental point [illegible] never has any subject of our [illegible] Mrs. Booth. Then Mr. Booth have forgotten that not [illegible] Booth's first [illegible] Booth's [illegible] to the beginning of the modern manager to the opinion of the old school of acting, and that to [illegible] Booth [illegible] Booth [illegible] Booth

JOHN WEBB'S DISCOVERY.

DAKOTA GOOSE-SHOOTING.

WHERE VETERANS ABIDE.

SO. TUCKER WENT FISHING.

Mr. Joseph Tucker, a well-known gentleman of 40 and the years set to the pleasant things and pleasures. Some, he is understood, say there a problem, unfortunately an inclination to let the duty come to more the than fifty years. The philosopher would say the key to unlocking that secret to a logical answer and applies as the rule to human pleasure such for.

Enlightenment and the German lexicon dictate to the theory that as the fourth generation has been spent the same with more strength usually ends in ache. But Mr. Tucker has patience.

It has now to the morning that he took his fourth spin over one of the three the were not struck by the fact that he was busy with, engaging his breakfast with regard to the daily newspaper. Instead of the usual sigh, and the he was in an unusually good humor. He ate an unusually hearty breakfast, and, unprovoked by any inquiries, made the announcement that he was going fishing. Mr. Tucker's family are accustomed to the daily unexpected, but even they were surprised at this announcement. Fishing is a pastime which Mr. Tucker has never indulged in, and the idea of his doing so was ridiculous. Besides, it was a cold, disagreeable day, and the weather was not favorable for fishing. But Mr. Tucker was firm in his determination, and, after a hearty breakfast, he started for the river.

Mr. Tucker is a man who has a reputation for doing things in a thorough manner, and he was not long in getting his fishing outfit. He purchased a fine rod, a reel, a line, a basket, and a number of other articles which are necessary to the complete equipment of a fisherman. He then went to the river, and, after renting a boat, he started out to fish. He had never fished before, but he had read a great deal about it, and he thought he knew how to do it. He baited his hook with a piece of meat, and, throwing the line over the side of the boat, he sat down to wait for a bite.

He had not to wait long. Almost as soon as his hook had sunk to the bottom of the river he felt a tug at the line, and, thinking that he had caught a fish, he began to pull in his line. He pulled and pulled, but, strangely enough, he could not get the fish to the surface of the water. He thought that it must be a very large fish, and he was very much excited. He pulled harder than ever, but still
